What Will You Create with the 2023 Calendar?

Join us on an artistic journey and get ready to express your creativity! Art is all around us every day, making it a terrific way to connect and communicate with others and the world around us.

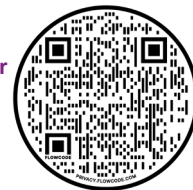

You're invited to explore expressive arts throughout the year with this calendar as your guide. We'll talk, create, and connect through art. Each month there will be an art-themed book and monthly art activity.

For even more fun activities, be sure to download the Art Journal. In addition to the opportunity to complete another art activity every month, you'll also have space to journal and talk about your art.

Create your own PRC-Salttillo Portfolio!

There are five primary areas of expressive arts and we'll focus on one area each month. But feel free to add, combine, and create in any area you want — that's all part of the fun!

- VISUAL ARTS – painting, drawing, sculpture, photography, collage, and more!
- DRAMA – plays, musicals, improv, comedy, movies, and more!
- MUSIC – rock, country, flute, violin, feet tapping, singing, and more!
- WRITING – short stories, books, novels, poems, essays, and more!
- DANCE – ballet, jazz, tap, ballroom, interpretive, and more!

TAAP Your Way through Expressive Arts!

Each month you'll find suggested core words to use while following the TAAP strategy!

You can TAAP your way through any activity or situation with your AAC learner. Using the TAAP strategy allows you to follow the lead of the AAC learner, make connections, and encourage communication. Plus, it allows you to communicate for more than just requesting and getting wants and needs met.

What exactly does TAAP stand for?

T Talk about it. Talk about what you see on the page or what you just read. We want you to comment, state an opinion, share and show objects, or whatever else comes to your mind!

A Ask a question. Ask the AAC learner an open-ended question to encourage participation.

A Acknowledge via response. Acknowledge and respond to the AAC learner. We want them to know they have been heard and are part of the conversation. You may need to put what they say in context.

P Propel the conversation and/or Predict. Keep the conversation going by making another natural comment, maintaining the topic, or make a prediction about what will happen next. Predicting is a great way to model your thoughts and ideas.

Download the TAAP Worksheet and plan what you'll say when reading and creating your art together

In 2022, we used the TAAP method to explore science, learn about the scientific method, and complete fun science experiments at home. This year, we will use the same TAAP strategy to learn, read, and talk about the arts. As you read each book, we encourage you to use the TAAP strategy. We will give you some ideas on words you can model while reading. Use other words that make sense to you and the AAC learner in the moment. You can model words, phrases, or sentences when TAAPing! Keep the interaction natural and keep modeling!

In the table below are some more suggested words and phrases you can use:

How much do you know about WordPower?

Check out ChatCorner at salttillo.com for all kinds of WordPower supports!

WordPower was designed by Nancy Inman with a variety of users in mind. A wide range of configurations are available! WordPower has as few as 20 buttons per page to as many as 140 buttons per page! Regardless of which version you pick, WordPower was designed with the same features and structure. WordPower takes advantage of the fact that almost 50% of what we say on a daily basis consists of only 100 words!

WordPower vocabularies are made up of single words, phrases, and the alphabet. We need access to all these forms to be able to communicate anything we want to say. All WordPower files contain next logical words when appropriate, creating easy predictive and generative communication. This helps to reduce the number of button pushes it takes to make a grammatical sentence. All WordPower files also use color coding, spelling, and alphabetization to organize the language making it easier for us to find words.

KEEP IT NATURAL

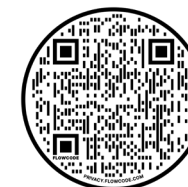

Aided language input, often called modeling, is one of the best ways to teach the language on an AAC device.

This strategy lets AAC learners see and hear their language in action! That means you have to learn the language on the AAC device and you have to speak that language!

We encourage you to keep your language natural when modeling and model throughout the day. If we ask too many questions or only model in structured activities, communicating with an AAC device can feel like work, or worse, a test! Keeping your language natural means moving beyond requesting, or to only use the AAC device to ask for things from others.

This year as we explore the arts and TAAP our way through art, we will give you tips and ideas on how to move beyond requesting and model throughout the day.

Worksheet here!

MAKE IT PERSONAL

Throughout the year, you'll read many tips on how to help individuals who use AAC grow language and connect with others.

For AAC learners to be able to say whatever they want to whomever they want, you'll need to add words to the vocabulary file or customize it. This will allow the AAC learner to talk about the things that are important to them.

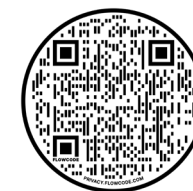

Some words you can add now are:

- People – the names of family members, siblings, friends, classmates, and more
- Places – favorite restaurants, parks, or other preferred places
- Favorite things – objects (like toys or blankets), artists (musicians, actors, etc.), TV shows, or movies

Later this year (in September and October), we will talk about Visual Scenes and the Stories & Scripts featured in WordPower. These features also require customization but enable the AAC learner to participate in conversation and interactions. We'll talk more about ways to use these features in September and October.

Need help planning what words to add?

Use the Making it Personal Planning Handout to brainstorm ideas!

Look in the Mirror

Use a mirror to create portraits of yourself and others this month. Get creative with the colors and use as many as you want! And most of all, have fun using your artistic nature!

What You'll Need:

- Paints (acrylic work best)
- A mirror
- Paintbrush(es)
- Water
- Paper

Steps:

1. Place your mirror somewhere steady and easy to look at.
2. As you look into the mirror, paint on the mirror the face you see. Paint just the outline or fill it all in; you decide how your artwork will look.
3. After you've painted your face on the mirror, get your paper and press the paper on the image to transfer the paint.
4. Remove the paper and let dry.
5. Frame and enjoy your artwork!

Express yourself! You can paint your own face, paint others' faces, or anything you place in front of the mirror.

Download the monthly Art Journal! You'll find more info on this artwork, plus an extra project, ideas to TAAAP through art, and a chance to reflect on your art.

NO, THANK YOU!

Protesting is a powerful communication function!

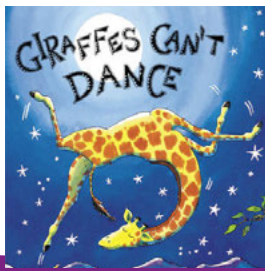

When we protest, we can begin to take control over our bodies and the environment around us. We gain a little bit of control when we learn to protest with spoken words, not just behaviors.

Protesting is a skill that starts to develop very early! Children begin protesting by saying “no” as early as one year of age! As language continues to develop, children learn to protest with spoken words to get what they want, avoid things they don’t like, and have more control in their world.

Do we model these words for AAC learners enough? If you aren’t, start now! You can model words and phrases like:

- No
- Don’t
- Oh, no
- Not
- No way
- And more!

Dancing in the Dark

Use light and music to express yourself this month while you dance in the dark.

Steps:

1. Pick a dark room to dance in, making sure obstacles have been cleared so no one gets hurt while dancing in the dark. As an alternative, you may choose to pick a room that is not completely dark to maintain safety while dancing.
2. Create your playlist of songs. Gather enough flashlights for all the dancers.
3. Turn on the flashlights, turn up the music, and turn off the lights. Have fun dancing in the dark!

Helpful Tips:

- Pick one person to take pictures or a video of your dance.
- Make your dance more interesting by giving every dancer two flashlights. Or make the lights different colors by placing tissue paper over the light.
- Add extra fun by giving everyone glow-in-the-dark wands, necklaces, and more that can often be found at your local dollar store.

DESCRIBE IT!

Can you give me that blue thing? We use describing words all the time!

When we can't find the word we are looking for or we don't know the name of something, we describe it!

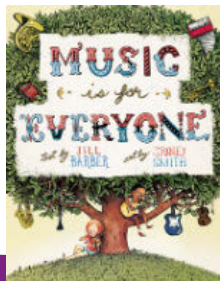

For individuals using AAC, not all objects or words can be programmed into a device. So, it's important to use describing words to enable AAC learners to talk about everything! Knowing the words to describe is a powerful communication tool! In WordPower, the Describe category lets you talk about size, shape, colors, and other physical attributes, like new/old, wet/dry, and more. Explore and use these descriptive words as much as possible.

There are two strategies you can use to start modeling the use of describing words. You can use the TAAP strategy or you can use the "descriptive method."

Check out the handouts in the ChatCorner highlighting the TAAP strategy and the Descriptive Method.

Sing With Your Voice

We want to hear you sing at the top of your lungs! Have a karaoke night singing core-aoke with your AAC device and your favorite songs.

Below are several suggestions for how you can sing along:

1. One person acts as DJ and stops the song before a targeted core word. This pause allows time for the AAC user to sing along.
2. Some users may not need a pause; they can sing their words with the AAC device in time with the music.
3. Let the music play and allow the AAC learner to sing their words as a remix to the song.

Helpful Tip:

- Refer to the Art Journal for a list of suggested songs for core-aoke.

TELL ME HOW YOU FEEL!

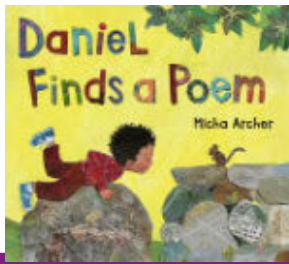

We might not think about it much, but we make comments a lot throughout the day!

Wow! Uh-oh! Cool! We use these and many other words frequently to communicate.

Why is commenting so important? Commenting is a social communication skill. Research tells us that one of the main reasons we communicate is to develop and maintain social relationships with the people around us. If we don't have the social language and social skills, the connections we make with others may be limited. As you model throughout the day, make sure to comment when talking to your AAC learner.

What can you comment on? Make comments on things and events that take place around you. Did your favorite song just come on? Model words like cool or awesome! If your snack tastes funny...yuck! Model it all!

WHAT DO YOU THINK?

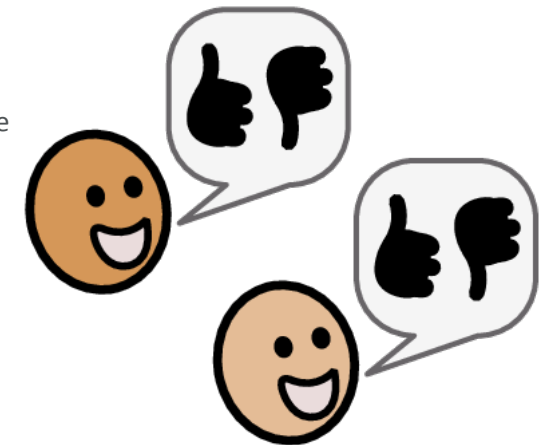

Stating an opinion is more than commenting, though it can seem similar. When sharing opinions, we are connecting with people.

We may share the same opinion and strengthen a friendship. We may hold different opinions, but we are learning more about each other, which can strengthen a relationship.

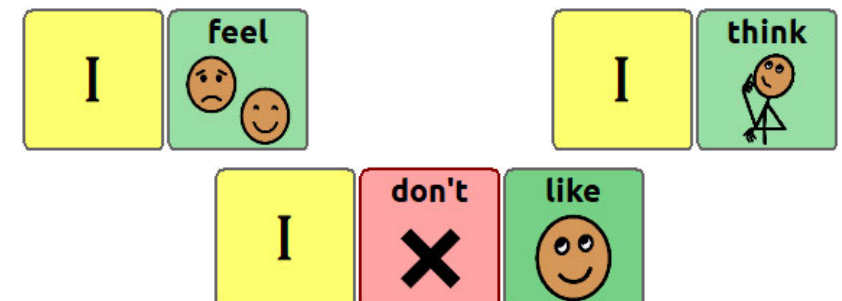

Find ways to share your opinions throughout the day. You can use phrases such as, "I think...", "I feel...", and "I hope..." to express yourself.

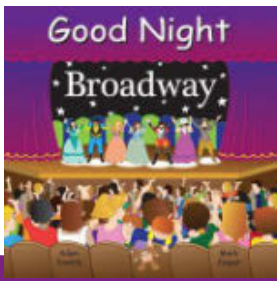

There are many opportunities throughout the day to share your opinions. You might share your opinions:

- After watching a TV show or movie
- After reading a book
- In conversation about the events of the day
- In conversation about recent news or topics

There are many times you can share your opinion. And make sure to ask for and listen to your AAC learner's opinion in the conversation too!

GIVE ME A HAND PLEASE!

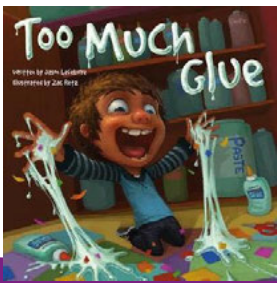

Maybe you've been told, "move beyond requesting" or "don't ask too many questions."

You were encouraged to do more than request with an AAC device. But there is one area of requesting you may have skipped over previously...requesting help.

When you request someone's help, several things happen. You get some help or relief in a situation, which is good for you. But you've also made a connection with another person. Ask for help. No one knows it all or can do it all. Ask for help and build relationships with those around you.

In most WordPower vocabularies, the word "help" can be found on the homepage for several reasons. If there is an emergency, you should be able to quickly ask for help. And we use it more than you think every day. Can I help with that? I need help. Can you help me? And more!

Pieces of Art

Be careful and don't use too much glue with this art project! Or do and see what wonder you'll create, like Matty from this month's story!

What You'll Need:

- Construction paper (different colors)
- Scissors
- Glue

Steps:

1. Cut your construction paper into different sizes and shapes. Make sure you leave one piece of paper whole so you can glue your snippets to it.
2. Arrange and glue the snipped pieces of paper to create your work of art. You can try to make a scene or object, like a flower or sunset. Or keep your work abstract and arrange the paper however you feel in the moment.

Download the monthly Art Journal! You'll find more info on this artwork, plus an extra project, ideas to TAAP through art, and a chance to reflect on your art.

Take a picture and save it to your PRC-Salttillo Portfolio available for download here!

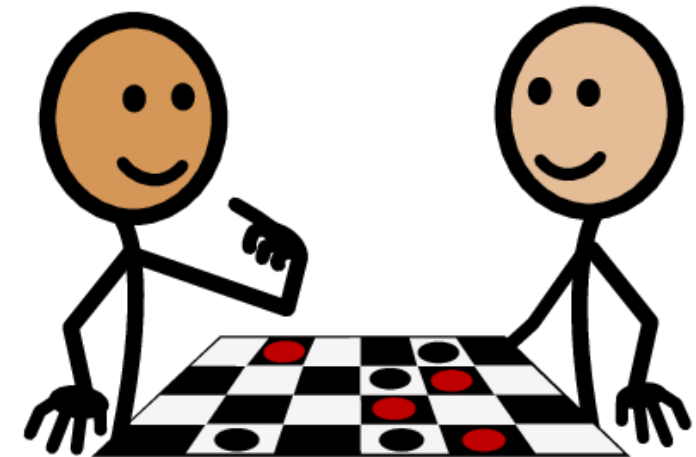

WHOSE TURN IS IT ANYWAY?

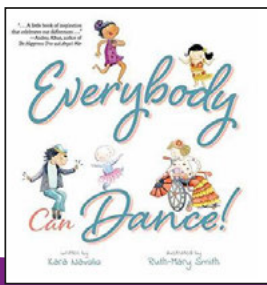

We don't just take turns when we play games.

Throughout the day, in all our communications, we take turns with others. Taking turns in conversation is an important social skill to develop.

If we interrupt or speak over others, we may be seen as rude. If we don't take enough turns or don't respond, we may be seen as rude. If your response during your turn is on a different topic, this may cause a communication breakdown and others may be confused.

You can start teaching turn taking in structured tasks, like games, and using words "my turn" and "your turn." Remember to grow and expand turn taking skills to avoid communication breakdowns as the language and skills of the individual using AAC grow.

Everybody Can Dance by Kara Navolio Illustrated by Ruth-Mary Smith

When the music starts, no one can resist the beat! This book is full of colorful pictures that celebrate dancing. Children are encouraged to dance and express themselves in this fun rhyming and rhythmic book. Everybody can dance! Will you join us?

Put a Little Boogie In It!

How do you make a tissue dance? You put a little boogie in it!

We aren't talking about blowing your nose! We want you to dance with tissues. You can create a fun dance using a tissue as a prop. Tissues are great to use as dance props as they float in the air making a magical dance.

This month gather your tissues and create your playlist. If you need a few more dance ideas, download the Art Journal with some fun visuals on what to do with your tissues while dancing.

Download the monthly Art Journal! You'll find more info on this artwork, plus an extra project, ideas to TAAP through art, and a chance to reflect on your art.

A PICTURE IS WORTH A THOUSAND WORDS

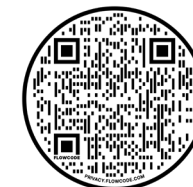

What is a visual scene display?

A visual scene is a way of helping individuals engage in and communicate about personal events. A visual scene contains a picture or image with related pre-programmed messages that support communication.

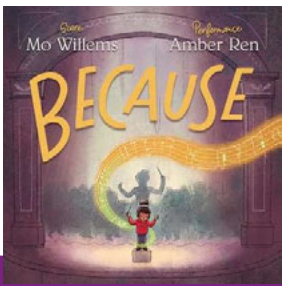

We don't recommend using visual scenes for all communication, but there are times when it can be effective. So, when would you use it? Storytelling is a great time to use visual scenes. The story doesn't change, so it's more powerful for an individual using AAC to use a visual scene to tell the story. You can make visual scenes about vacations, other fun events, or even your PRC-Salttillo Portfolio.

Download the visual scene PRC-Salttillo Portfolio to talk about all the works of art you have created this year!

WordPower also has several pre-built, ready to customize Visual Scenes pages in the Groups category!

Because by Mo Willems
Illustrated by Amber Ren

Sometimes big changes can come because of one little thing. This inspiring book shares the journey a young girl takes to become a musician and conductor on center stage. Read the chain reaction of events that occur in this girl's life all because of one tiny event.

Make Your Own Drum Beat

To create your next musical masterpiece, you'll need to build your own drums first. With just a few materials, many you may already have in your home, you'll be ready to craft your own drums. In this month's Art Journal, you'll find instructions for making two types of drums: hand drums or can drums.

Try your hand at building one or both and start making beautiful music!

Download the monthly Art Journal! You'll find more info on this artwork, plus an extra project, ideas to TAAP through art, and a chance to reflect on your art.

TELL ME MORE...

Another way to tell stories and save messages you use repeatedly is to use the Stories & Scripts pages in WordPower!

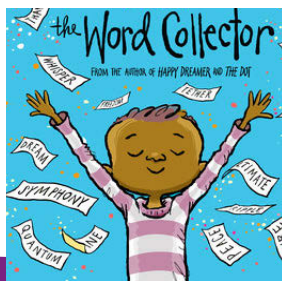

The Stories & Scripts pages allow you to save messages on the fly or prepare and plan stories; then, this information can be shared later. This feature is great for any time you may repeat yourself or a story, but don't need a picture to go with your story.

Stories & Scripts is similar to using Visual Scenes, but there is one important difference. The Stories & Scripts pages are not created on or always related to a specific picture.

Need some inspiration to start using Stories & Scripts in your life? Here are a few ideas:

- Tell a story about a recent or favorite vacation
- Create a page around a favorite TV show, movie, or book
- Tell a funny story
- Designate a page to talk about school activities (when the individual comes home from school, they can tell all about their day!)

Tell Us a Story!

Write a story this month using many words, just like Jerome! You can write a short story or a long story. You decide!

Make sure you download the monthly Art Journal to get story starter prompts and word dice. There are three word dice in the portfolio packet. One die has characters you can add to your story. The second has adjectives to add to your story. The third die has actions to include in your story.

You decide how often to roll the dice (for every sentence or every other sentence?) You can also decide if you roll one, two, or all three dice at once. Finally, you decide how many times you are going to roll dice. Once? Twice? Or keep it spontaneous and roll whenever you feel like it!

We can't wait to hear your story!

COMMUNICATE ANYTIME ALL THE TIME!

We all have the right to communicate.

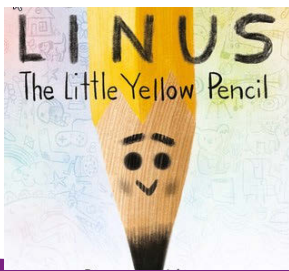

When we are happy, sad, hurt, or bored, we communicate those feelings (and more!) to people around us. Individuals who use AAC devices have the same right to communicate all the time. Because individuals who only use AAC do not speak to communicate many messages, we must plan for and ensure they have a reliable way to always communicate.

What if the battery of the device dies? What if you all are in the swimming pool? In these and other situations, you need to have a lite-tech AAC system set up to use. There are many types of lite-tech systems available for download from our website. There are single page boards, flip books with many words available, posters, and more!

Linus the Little Yellow Pencil by Scott Magoon

Linus, the little yellow pencil, and his eraser, Ernie, don't always agree on what looks great. As the art show approaches, Linus and Ernie learn to work together to become great friends and artists. Making art and friends isn't always easy in the beginning, but it is worth it in the end!

Let Your Pencil Flow

Let your creative juices flow with this inventive art project. Using a pencil or marker, you'll draw lines in any shape and direction you like. Then, you can color in your design with colored pencils, crayons, or paints. You can make it as simple or colorful as you like.

What You'll Need:

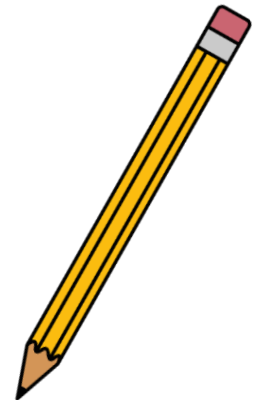

- Paper
- Black pencil or marker
- Crayons, colored pencils or paints

Steps:

1. Using the pencil or black marker, draw lines on your piece of paper. Your lines can be curvy squiggles, zigzags, or straight lines. Or use all different types of lines.

Helpful Tip:

- Make sure you leave some larger spaces and don't overcrowd your lines.
- 2. Next, use your colors (crayons, colored pencils, or paints) to color in the spaces created by your lines. Fill them all in, color in half, or just a few — it's up to you to decide.

LAUGHTER IS THE BEST MEDICINE

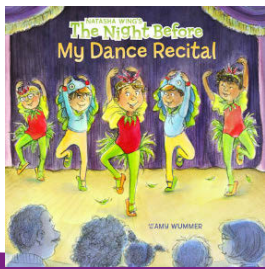

We all love to laugh!

Many studies have shown the benefits of laughter; it can help reduce stress and make us feel better. It can also help us build and maintain relationships with others! Have you modeled telling jokes or teasing with your AAC learner?

WordPower vocabularies have a Jokes page built in! There are several jokes you can start laughing at today. If your AAC learner does not understand the joke, you have an opportunity to explain it and build language. Jokes are great for many things! So, make it part of your daily routine to tell a joke to each other.

Occasionally, you should take out old jokes or add new jokes to keep it fresh. We could all use a good laugh every now and again!

The Night Before My Dance Recital by Natasha Wing Illustrated by Amy Wummer

Join a young girl the night before her first dance recital. She has practiced and practiced, but she is still worried she may make a mistake. This young girl experiences all the emotions associated with a first recital and learns it will all be okay. Read with us about the night before the dance recital.
